Not illustrated. 1801 Excerpt: . . . not only friendship but obedience; assuring me that in proof of the latter they had sent out parties to arrest such of the mountaineers as would be found carrying wine and gunpowder to the French camp, and placing eighty prisoners of this description at my disposal. I had thus the satisfaction to find Buonapartes career farther northward effectually stopped, by a warlike people inhabiting an impenetrable country. General Klebers division had been sent eastward towards the fords of the Jordan, to oppose the Damascus army; it was recalled from thence to take its turn in the daily essorts to mount the breach at Acre, in which every other division in succeflion had failed, with the loss of their bravest men, and above threefourths of their officers. It seems much was hoped from this division, as it had by its sirmnels, and the steady front it opposed...
