Not illustrated. 1919 Excerpt: .-156,767-156,516-156,405 While the first column of values would be amply adequate for most statistical purposes, the second makes a still closer approximation to the actual values, the differences being only-000,017, + 000,026, +-000,093, + 000,111 as against-000,463, + 000,365, + 000,189, +-000,362 respectively. The greatest improvements are in the mean and standard deviation. Accordingly it is well worth using smaller terminal subranges, if they are available as in the cases of cricket scores, wages, house values, infant mortality and other frequency material. (8) Illustration II. (b) We now propose to consider the moment-coefficients of a doubly truncated normal curve. We will take the portion of the above 1,000,000 distribution with unit standard deviation from variate value 125 to variate value 375 and divide it into five groups, i.e. Relative frequencies Absolute frequencies Using (iii) and (iv) which now involve all five groups we find From these results, since  $s = a s$  and  $b s = b s$  we have for the abruptness functions: It will be seen that the Sheppard's corrections alone give very unsatisfactory results, and that while the full corrections for the first three moments are statistically satisfactory, the approximation of the fourth moment-coefficient would not for certain investigations be adequate. We are in fact using only five groups and trusting to these for the accuracy of our abruptness coefficients. We will accordingly now test what improvement arises when we divide our terminal groups into five subgroups and calculate the abruptness...
